

WASHINGTON POST
AND HERALD

Sanitized - Approved For Release

MAR 12 1960

The State of Real Estate

CPYRGHT

ANTHONY T. ZAIA, architect-engineer for the Central Intelligence Agency, has been cited for an "outstanding contribution" to the new headquarters building of the CIA. His plan "has permitted the maximum number of necessary changes in plans during construction with a minimum of disruptions" and also will facilitate the move to the new building. Zaia has the degree of Bachelor of Architecture from Massachusetts and is a member of the American Institute of Architects.

Zaia